Tip us off

The Age has had a dedicated investigative unit since the 1980s committed to uncovering significant state, national and international stories. Today, the unit is led by three journalists - Michael Bachelard, Nick McKenzie and Richard Baker - who work alone and with the paper's specialists to dig beneath the daily chatter of news. Many of our best stories come from tip-offs from the public. Click the picture above to tip us off, anonymity is guaranteed.

Investigative reporters

Richard Baker

Richard Baker has broken stories on the Victorian Casino and Gaming Authority, China wanting to set up its own uranium mine and Tigris Petroleum in Iraq.

Michael Bachelard

Michael broke stories on property shyster Henry Kaye, the demise of Poppy King's lipstick business and the murder of Melbourne lawyer Max Green.

Nick McKenzie

Nick McKenzie has broken major stories on a range of issues including terrorism, police corruption, defence procurement and asylum seekers. His reporting has sparked several inquiries, including a 2004 inquiry into links between police and organised crime.
